My Mental Health &
Wellbeing booklet

This booklet has been designed by
Lancashire Mind thanks to Spar.

Inside you'll find information about mental health and wellbeing, and details of organisations that can help you if you feel like you need some support.

There are also different activities you can try throughout the booklet - enjoy!

What is Mental Health and Wellbeing?

Mental Health - how we feel, think and act.

We all have mental health and it can be good, OK, poor, or make us ill, so it's important to look after it.

Wellbeing - how people feel on a day to day basis, and how they function (do stuff).

Anxiety

- a physical feeling of fear or panic

We feel anxious in response to something that threatens the safety of ourselves or people we care about. It's normal for you to feel some anxiety or stress, for example, over exams.

For most people, once the situation has passed, they feel better and calm down. If the situation has passed, but the feelings of fear or panic remain or get stronger and start to affect daily living, then that is when anxiety can become a problem.

Try this...

- 5 Steps to Calm

This simple exercise can help you feel calm and more settled. Take a deep breath before you start...

5 - Name five things you can see

4 - Name four things you can hear

3 - Name three things you can feel

2 - Name two things you can smell

1 - Name one thing you can taste

Low Mood

Feeling down or 'low' is normal. We all have times when we feel sad and it's hard to keep going. Often this will last a day or two and then it will pass. Sometimes there is an obvious reason - like changing schools, our hormones, friendship or relationship difficulties, or parental conflict.

People sometimes say they're feeling depressed when they're having a bad day. A low mood will tend to lift after a few days or weeks.

Depression

Depression is when sadness and low feelings do not go away for over 2 weeks. These feelings can overwhelm a person and stop them from doing the things they normally do.

Sometimes there's no obvious reason for feeling depressed, and depression is not the same for everyone - everyone feels different and there's no right way to feel.

Try this...

- Hunt the Good Stuff

This simple mood booster can help to remind ourselves of the good stuff in our lives. Try writing down 3 positive things that happened to you each day, no matter how big or small! For example...

- Mon - I ate my favourite food
Tues - I spoke with an old friend today
Wed - The sunset this evening
Thur -
Fri -
W/e -

Your

Body Image

- how you feel about your body

For a lot of people, maintaining a positive body image especially during puberty can be difficult. It's common to have the odd negative thought about your body.

People with poor body image may develop a complicated relationship with food. In some cases, this can turn into an eating disorder, which is a mental health problem that can affect how much and what they eat. You can find out more from the websites over the page...

Try this...

- Compliment yourself

If you catch yourself having negative thoughts, reply to these by giving yourself a compliment. This could be in your head, out loud, drawn, or written down on paper.

Or this...

- Go offline

Social media makes it easy to compare ourselves to others. Try taking a break for a while, and see how you feel. It's ok not to be constantly available online.

Try this...

In the gingerbread person, write what you like about your body, as well as any skills, qualities and abilities that make you you.

Keep this page as a future reminder if negative thoughts start creeping back up!

Self harm

- hurting yourself on purpose

Self-harm is when you injure yourself as a way of dealing with very difficult feelings, painful memories or overwhelming situations and experiences. Self-harm can be very different for everyone and can carry serious risks, but this doesn't mean someone who self-harms is always intending to cause themselves serious injury.

Sometimes, you might not know why you hurt yourself. If you don't understand the reasons for your self-harm, you are not alone and you can still get help.

Suicidal Thoughts

- thoughts of ending your life

Experiencing thoughts of suicide can be really frightening. Suicidal thoughts can feel like they come from nowhere or begin as fleeting thoughts of wanting to disappear or escape. They may progress into feelings of hopelessness and worthlessness and planning to end your life.

If you're experiencing thoughts of suicide, it's important to know that there is help available. It can take a huge amount of courage to talk about these thoughts. Take some time to think about who you might want to talk to.
